A Message from Our Vicar

Is it just me that's noticed, or is it that almost every time we switch on the news there are even more revelations about those in public and high offices, either politicians, financiers, or newspaper editors that are being uncovered? Are we losing the will to be shocked at what depths some people will stoop to, to get a good story? Thankfully the public voice is becoming much more focused in its outrage against dishonesty and self interest.....and quite rightly so. Surely we have a duty to challenge dishonest practices and injustice and to bring public office holders to account as well as those who report on them.

However, is there not a distinction between challenging injustice and total character assassination? We don't have the stocks any more, (apart from the ones in Shotwick outside Jack's!) but the public voice is in danger of focussing on total public humiliation and ridicule. As the old saying goes 'people who live in glass house, shouldn't throw stones.'

It brings to mind the incident when Jesus came across a woman who had been caught in adultery and was about to be stoned, as the Law required. He challenged the crowd 'if any of you is without sin, let him be the first to throw a stone at her.' [John 8] Jesus still challenged the woman to change her ways. Wrongdoing does need to be brought to account, but what about mercy and compassion?

As Christians we are called to 'act justly, to love mercy and to walk humbly with our God' [Micah 6:8]. We are called to play our part in the society in which we live, to seek justice, to bring the light of Christ in to the world. However, we all too readily forget that when light shines it shows up the good and the bad, not just in others, but in ourselves too!

We are all human. We all make mistakes. But isn't this what Jesus died to save us from? So that in him, we will find forgiveness when we go wrong and the light of his love to see the way we should be living.

But is it also not true that justice will catch up eventually?

A thief in Antwerp, Belgium, was more than surprised when, after burgling a house, he jumped over a nine foot wall, dropping down the other side only to find himself in the city prison!

Cathy

Bell Matters

On Saturday 18th June St Michaels hosted a meeting of the Wirral Branch of the Chester Diocesan Guild of Church Bell Ringers. This is the first time in living memory that Shotwick have actually hosted a meeting we have in the past played second fiddle or back up to either Burton or Capenhurst.

People enjoy ringing at Shotwick and the bells were fully occupied from 3pm to 5pm. We then had a half hour church service taken by Basil Keys (thanks Basil). Hymn singing is well up the list of what bell ringers are good at and with June playing the organ, I don't think we did too badly.

Then it was tea time, and what a feast the female side of Shotwick bell ringers provided led by our very own bell ringing catering manager Joyce Jones. In the speech of thanks following the tea the speaker suggested she should be called Rejoice Jones. The main course was ham turkey and pork pie with potato salad etc. The delicious sweets were provided by Susan Costello Jane Lewis and Eunice Parry, all very yummy.

It was I think a successful meeting and I have received some nice comments about it, Thanks to everyone who helped make it a success. FP.

Bell ringing practice every Friday evening. Contact Frank Parry for more details.

BIZARRE VISITORS TO CHESTER CATHEDRAL

On 16th June Nick Fry from Chester Cathedral came to give us a talk on bizarre visitors to the Cathedral.

Nick is the longest serving member of staff at the Cathedral and one of his responsibilities is looking after visitors. He is also the author of the Cathedral guidebook.

Nick began by explaining that 40-50 years ago Cathedral heritage tourism was unlooked for, and it is only in the last 50 years that it has become popular. Visitors are essential to raise money to maintain the fabric, but they expect the same facilities at a Cathedral as at any other heritage attraction and there is a need to maintain a balance between commercial astuteness and the Cathedral as a church.

Nick has found that the Cathedral means different things to different people. It is a living, working church, but many visitors see it only as a museum and do not realise that services take place there on a regular basis. Even a recent Council document referred to Evensong as a "medieval heritage experience."

Most visitors are fascinated by what Nick has to say when he takes them round the Cathedral, but he had many humorous tales to tell of men who jiggle coins in their pockets the whole time and people who read the guidebook (which he wrote) during the tour and then try to catch him out with difficult questions.

Chester Cathedral welcome people as warmly as it can and Nick said that he always makes sure that visitors know that they are welcome to stay for services.

Many thanks to Nick for coming to talk to us and to the catering committee for providing the refreshments afterwards.
